The Young Girl and the Sea

Seven-month voyage said to make Watson, 16, the youngest sailor to circle the globe solo, non-stop and unassisted

A teenage girl who sailed solo around the world was greeted by thousands of cheering supporters on her return home to Sydney today after her seven-month voyage.

In her 30ft yacht, Ella's Pink Lady, Jessica Watson, 16, crossed the finish line of her round-the-world journey, which supporters claim makes her the youngest sailor to circle the globe solo, non-stop and unassisted.

"I'm a bit confused. I just don't know what to think and what to say at the moment," Watson said in an interview broadcast live on a screen outside the Sydney Opera House. "It's all a bit much but absolutely amazing."

Watson, from Buderim, north of Brisbane, in Queensland, sailed out of Sydney on 18 October amid fierce criticism of her parents for allowing her to attempt such a feat. Throughout her journey they stuck to the view that she was well prepared, noting that she has been sailing since she was eight.

"I don't think any of us would ever doubt Jessica Watson again," said the premier of New South Wales, Kristina Keneally, who greeted her on her return home.

Watson traveled north-east through the South Pacific and across the equator, south to Cape Horn at the tip of South America, across the Atlantic Ocean to South Africa, through the Indian Ocean and around southern Australia.

The route took her through some of the world's most dangerous waters, and she battled through huge storms and suffered seven knockdowns.

But her journey was characterized by moments of beauty. On her blog, she described wonderful sunrises over glassy seas, the excitement of spotting a blue whale and the unforgettable sight of a shooting star racing across the night sky above her boat.
